

We are excited to announce that Kat Pegler is our new Artist-in-Residence for Hydrogen Research here at Brunel University London. Kat is a multidisciplinary artist, producer and immersive sound composer whose focus is on exploring the more-than-human and worldbuilding in the climate emergency. Her past work combines music, interspecies collaboration, folklore and theatre to create quirky and surreal experiences that encourage people to think about the world differently. She is excited to be collaborating with various people here in Brunel across the Hydrogen sphere and is looking to connect with diverse minds across campus to help inform the work and expand perspectives. If you are a scientist, researcher, student, staff or member of the public that fancies being involved in this intriguing future-facing collaboration, you can reach out to her at: kat@kerbsidecollective.com

You can find out more about her here:

<https://www.kerbsidecollective.com/katpegler> or connect with her on IG: <https://www.instagram.com/katkatmusic>