23. EDUCATIONAL AIMS OF THE PROGRAMME

The LLB Law is aimed at producing confident and talented graduates who are well rounded in their knowledge and skills, and broad minded in their outlook. Our goal is to produce graduates who have a strong foundation in the underlying theories and substantive principles of English Law and able to locate these theories and principles in their wider socio-political, procedural, institutional and cultural contexts, and who are critical thinkers and able scholars. Our objective is for our graduates to emerge from the university with sound knowledge encapsulated in a qualifying law degree, good analytical abilities, and well developed legal research and writing skills. Our emphasis is as much on the application of knowledge and the development and enhancement of skills, as on the acquisition of the knowledge itself.

The LLB Law with Professional Placement programme has the additional aims of providing students with high quality first-hand experience of the world of legal practice and its relation to academia, as well as to allow students to form a reflective view of the various roles, challenges and professional opportunities that legal practice presents.

In addition to the aims achieved by the LLB Law, the LLB Law with International Arbitration and Commercial Law will aim to produce graduates with a good knowledge and understanding of how international arbitration works as a form of dispute resolution, particularly within the context of commercial law, an ability to think critically about methods for the resolution of commercial disputes and the importance of cross-border transactions in the contemporary world, an ability to apply relevant substantive and procedural law and the ability to demonstrate relevant career skills.

Learning/teaching strategies and methods to enable learning outcomes to be achieved, including formative assessments

In order to facilitate the acquisition of the requisite knowledge and understanding, the degree programme is divided into a number of study and modular blocks representing the "Foundation" (referred to as "core" Law subjects within the law profession) and electives (optional modules). All the Foundation subjects are taken at Levels 1 and 2. Electives (plus the final year project which is a compulsory and core subject) are taken at Level 3.

Opportunities designed to aid learners in their task include a mix of lectures, compulsory seminars and/or small-group tutorials, legal skills workshops and personal tutorial hours. All study and modular blocks are taught by a combination of lectures, seminars, while the Legal Skills and Method study block at level I also offers opportunities for participation in practical exercises (mooting, debating, role playing) and relevant extra-curricular activities, and includes a number of skills workshops organised by the Law School in cooperation with the Academic Skills department and the Placement & Careers Centre.

Learners are, throughout the degree programme, encouraged and expected to undertake independent reading both to supplement and consolidate what is being formally taught in the classroom and to broaden their individual knowledge and understanding of the subject; coursework serves to further strengthen this.

Seminars often involve, in addition to questions aimed at knowledge acquisition and application, a number of compulsory activities (such as case digests and analyses, problem solving, group work, and oral presentations) that enable learners to acquire and develop relevant skills. They also provide a forum, in conjunction if necessary with personal tutorial hours, for formative assessment and feedback.

The 40-credit final year project takes the form of a supervised dissertation on a topic chosen by the student and approved by the Dissertation Tutor and allocated supervisors. It allows students to undertake in-depth research and critical analysis of a specific area of law, and to present their theses and the outcome of their research, both in written form, and in the form of an oral presentation before their supervisors and a number of their peers.

Formal feedback on assessed work and informal feedback via seminars and tutorial hours are offered to learners on their learning and progress, which provide an opportunity for further learning.

Students are also offered opportunities to consolidate their learning and enhance their critical thinking, research and career skills by actively participating in professional development short courses, legal skills workshops, research events and relevant extra-curricular activities.

Summative assessment strategies and methods to enable learning outcomes to be demonstrated

The degree programme places great emphasis on the acquisition and development of skills and as well as knowledge. Brunel Law School uses examinations and coursework to test the attainment and application of specific or general knowledge and understanding, and also the acquisition of relevant skills. The School has devised a very full range of assessment means within these two modes of assessment. The assessment means utilised include, for example, case analyses; applying the law to problem scenarios; arguing a theoretical position; and small research projects, and are designed to evaluate whether the outcomes of the programme have been achieved.

The Integrated Legal Skills synoptic assessment at level I tests students' ability to put theory into practice and to demonstrate relevant legal skills through requiring the active participation in related activities and undertaking specific tasks, written and other (e.g. participation in reading group session, moot, debate etc.).

Synoptic Assessments I and II, at level I, test the students' ability to synthesise substantive and procedural knowledge, and to apply them to practical problems.

To summarise, the learning outcomes for each level and the modules comprising the level are assessed by way of a mixture of unseen written examinations, assessed coursework and other activities. This is in line with practice in other leading Law Schools. The marking schemes reflect the differentiated level outcomes specified in this document. The learning outcomes specific to the LLB Law with Professional Placement are assessed by coursework and also by the satisfactory completion of a period of work placement with an employer approved by Brunel Law School.

25. Programme Structure, progression and award requirements

Programme structures and features: levels, assessment blocks, credit and progression and award requirements

- Compulsory block: one which all students registered for the award are required to take as part of their programme of study. These will be listed in the left hand column;
- Optional block: one which students choose from an 'option range'. These will be listed in the right hand column;
- A core assessment is an assessment identified within an assessment block or modular block (either compulsory or optional) which must be passed (at grade D- or better) in order to be eligible to progress and to be eligible for the final award. All core assessments must be specified on the programme specification next to the appropriate assessment or modular block:

Where students are expected to pass the block at D- or better, but not necessarily all elements, then the block itself is core.

e.g. AB3000 Project (40)

Core: Block

Where only some elements of assessments are required to be passed at D- or better, these will be identified by listing each element that is core

e.g. ABXXX1 Title (XX credits)

Core: 1 & 4

Where students are expected to pass all assessments in a block then this will be identified. By setting the assessment this way, students are also required to pass the block by default. This will be identified thus:

e.g. ABXXXX Title (XX credits)

Core: All, Block

- A non-core assessment does not have to be passed at grade D- or better, but must be better than a grade F, in order to progress and to be eligible for the final award.
